REVIEW

5

Welcome to Winchester Museums' newsletter

As promised in Review 4 this issue contains a short piece on F2, the museum's new collections facility, which is now up and running and welcoming visitors.

In addition, in Review 5 we celebrate much else that is new: the latest publication in the English Heritage- funded archaeology series; and recent acquisitions to the Bronze Age and Anglo-Saxon collections.

Very much from another era, Robin Iles describes an intriguing item, a lekythos, kept in an old shoe box and, possibly, well-connected.

Michael Nelles continues his series of profiles of contributors to the volunteer programme at the City and Westgate Museums. Here, he profiles, Val Pegg, a retired primary school teacher who discovered volunteering at the museum to be the perfect way of combining her love of history with her love of teaching.

We also celebrate a decade of achievement: the Portable Antiquities Scheme in Hampshire is ten years old this year and Rob Webley, Hampshire Finds Liaison Officer, ponders what the next ten will bring.

And finally, if you're shopping early for Christmas and need some stocking fillers take a look at the latest range of retail goods featuring some of the museum's iconic pieces. Follow the link for details.

So, enjoy Review 5 and remember to ask your friends to sign up for future issues at:
